CALDRON

▲ The might of any school is most obvious in athletic conquests. One high-point in Central's history came in 1943 when its basketball team took state.

▲ The '43 team added to the 200 trophies in center hall which attest to Central's might.

A quick pass, a little fancy footwork, a basket, and from the Central bleachers comes the chant, "Mighty, Mighty Central."

Mighty she is too. Fort Wayne's oldest school cannot be taken lightly. A quick glance illuminates a glory-filled history.

Strength bristles forth in many forms at Central. A prime factor, our qualified faculty, has made Central a smooth-running, efficient, education machine, producing many of today's leaders.

Replacing the worn "Old Building" with the modern, cheerful "East Building" has greatly improved Central's physical facilities.

A varied extra-curricular program for expanding interest rounds out the general aspects that make the pattern of "Mighty Central."

MIGHTY CENTRAL

Improved facilities ► offered by the remodeled building revitalized interest in scholarship. Senior Wayne Lockwood spends some extra time after school on a chemistry experiment in the new physics and chemistry lab.

◀ High above the Barr Street entrance are perched two eagles, bold symbols of Central's might.

A competent ▶ faculty has directed many of the city's, even the nation's, leaders into the world. Miss Vera Prue exemplifies this guiding influence.

▼ Central students show their deep respect for God as they give thanks for their many blessings. The Thanksgiving program is one of the many serious and moving moments in a year at Central.

Like the ever-burning Greek torch, spirit kindles our might and must be handed down

What is might, and how is it to be measured?

Might is power or force of any kind, whether of body or mind. It is an energy—an intensity of spirit.

Energy or power cannot be measured directly but in terms of something it does or can do.

Spirit, then, is logically the best gauge for Central's might because it can be the source of scholarly incentive, what makes a winning team, and that extra drive needed to make an extra-curricular a success.

Throughout her 55 years Central has housed a spirit that has always been a cause for pride in the community and an awesome fear in her rivals.

Her students have always guarded this spirit jealously, handing it down from class to class like the unextinguished Greek torch.

▲ A crowd overflows with enthusiasm and spirit, yelling its mightiest at the second Central Catholic game.

▼ A question, put visually before the student body when the spirit sagged dangerously, prodded the conscience of all who passed it daily.

HINDERING

A positive approach to a problem put apathy on the run and revived a sense of membership

To paint too cheery a picture of Central's might would be an untrue story of the year.

Many students had a touch of apathy; and even though there was much talk and concern as to what could be the cause, the problem was not too clear until the rededication program. By approaching the problem in a positive way, a panel made up of student leaders and Miss Connie Standish put things in focus.

With the realization that Central is made up of individuals united and that spirit is, in truth, a vigorous sense of membership, Central's spirit began to rise to what may prove its greatest height.

▲ At a pep session before a South Side game, Bob Tilker gives some facts on spirit lag. The Tigers got dynamic backing that night.

▼ Throughout the early basketball season one could spot large patches of wilted spirit. The let-George-do-it section began to break up, however, as we examined the problem.

Beautiful patterns in lines and angles, lights and shadows are the setting—in itself not Mighty Central, but a cold vacancy awaiting the ‘players.’

▲ As with a superhighway, one seldom sees the spacious beauty of center hall untraveled.

▼ That Central's warmth depends on human activity could hardly be more obvious than in the gloom of her empty auditorium.

◀ The angular spiral of the new center stairs is a handsome replacement of the old.

► The new, clean lockers create endless rows of homes away from home.

▼ Aluminum and tobacco flowers compliment each other's beauty in the newly remodeled entrance on Barr Street.

If one were to dramatize Central's might, the setting would be strikingly obvious. A quiet but almost breath-taking panorama of hues, textures, lines and angles, and light and shadows is now Central's.

The eye catches patterns in every nook and corner, from the design in the newly tiled floors to the rows of lights which make Central's day 24 hours long. Indeed the stage is set with the modern freshness of the day and equipped with the latest facilities available.

Yet something is missing; Central is but a building, a cold vacancy awaiting the individual players.

Comes the individual, lost on the set

Add to our drama the individual. He is lonely, of course, and brings little warmth. He may have talent and ambition galore but alone he has no reason to use it.

Our individual is but a symbol of the second ingredient needed for the play; but the stage is still dead. What still must be done to dramatize Central's might?

▲ The individual and Central make a lonely pair.

◀ Top: Who is more lonely than the player with his first part, waiting for his cue?

◀ The actor without the play finds himself a little man in the center of life's big theater.

▲ The past viewed through the present gives a clue to Central's might.
▼ On what is he waiting?

▲ Left: The set has lofty dimensions
when viewed from the bottom of a stairwell.

▲ Right: The set is empty on a Sunday afternoon. The curtain goes up Monday morning.

▼ The life at Central is still out of focus when only the individual and the building are considered.

► Our individual has a natural curiosity that opens doors to fellowship. Ask Don Roberts and Bill Dwyer.

► Something about sunshine and steps cements fellowship and puts strangers at ease. Enjoying the sun are Dan Harris, Jim Harter, Sandra Franklin, and Carolyn Ellis.

▼ Bottom right: All the griping about going to school; yet they're always there, waiting to be the first ones in. Mrs. Ruth Chause keeps her eye on the daily phenomenon.

▼ Bottom middle: To share a secret with you, my trusted friend. Caught in the pleasant exchange are Sandra Franklin, Sharon Harrington, and Phyllis Fuson.

▼ Middle: Central is always on a two-shift schedule of bustling activity, but on Back-to-School night she shines like a giant torch.

The setting and cast complete, the drama begins; the individual becomes friend, member, Centralite

On stage our individual meets another, the conversation begins, and suddenly the setting takes on warmth—the play has begun. The actors are joined by other small groups—two girls sharing a secret, three boys planning a trip, three couples sharing a walk in the sun on their lunch hour.

At first the groups seem disassociated, their relationship vague; but slowly a drama takes form as the players begin to think and act together. The stage seems alive, real, pulsating and full of warmth.

As the tangible results of the group's efforts become evident, the pattern of Central's potential takes shape; it is mighty.

▲ Oh, the release after a test!—to chat with friends after that deathly silence.

▼ The epitome of fellowship comes with that grand feeling at a pep session. Clap your hands, shout in unison—it's great to be a part of this! When the gym was still a storehouse, pep sessions were made possible by the mass gallantry of the underclass boys who sat on the floor.

You are the most important member of the cast, and might is measured by how you play your part

The might of Central is not in her masonry, though these halls be hallowed in the hearts of thousands; it is not in the individual, though his unit of talent is all-important. It is in the vital sense of membership that Centralites have always felt, that unites the setting and the cast, and that gets results, giving evidence of might in participation, co-operation, endeavor, devotion, and unity. These, then, are the intangible yet evident synonyms of Central's might.

The vital sense of membership depends on you and your realization that you are, in truth, either Central's potential weakness or might.

Central prepares her charges for varied lives; she has given many future

The teaching profession, which has been rising steadily in prestige, has not been neglected by Central pupils. Central has produced many more than her share of teachers.

In order to teach, to stimulate and inspire students, one must be a well-rounded individual, no matter what the special interests are or on what level one plans to teach.

Future teachers need English, first of all, to be able to express themselves and explain things to students. They must have history, government, and other social sciences, not only because well-educated persons are informed about such things, but also so they will understand people and their motives. They also need, of course, math and science.

A future teacher must begin to lay this broad foundation in high school, and Central's college preparatory course offers an excellent opportunity for this.

▲ What could be more important to the future teacher than a graphic understanding of the language with which she will communicate ideas to her pupils? Pat Mossberger explains her analysis of a sentence to Rose Shull and Penny Chudek while Gay Lambert and Mike Doherty look on.

► Top: Mr. John Baughman stresses the importance of keeping notes to his third period English class. Larry Morris, Jack Steigerwald, Alice Huffine, Ernestine Whitfield, Barbara Niswonger, Aljean Rogers, and John Torrez.

► Bottom: A bigger vocabulary and an appreciation of culture are two of the dividends earned by Latin students, such as Reggie Stiles, Jean Clark, and Joan Laird.

▼ Stirring the evil caldron of Macbeth's fate are Gloria Bishop, Liz Arnold, and Ethel Snellenberger as they enact the witch scene for their English 5 class.

Teachers broad educational foundations

▲ Top: Mr. Davis demonstrates reading technique for his seniors.

▲ Bottom: June Murray and Helga Koger wait for the next bit of dictation.

▲ The mathematics specialist has so much to learn—digest this; there is something more difficult waiting. Phil Fander, Ricky Hamm, and Bill Deck check an equation solved by determinates.

▼ Oral reading offers double impact appealing to both the ear and the eye. Vern Noll, Walter Guenin, and Rosalie Seiders demonstrate.

▲ "Practice makes perfect"—at least in typing, thinks senior Rose Kemm who plans for a career in the business world.

Tomorrow's prosperity begins right here

Today's business world is demanding from its employees both a proficiency in business methods and a broader liberal background. Meeting the challenge, Central continues to supply our community with efficient secretaries and the colleges and business training programs with eager minds more than ready for the advanced step.

The courses here are broad in their scope, ranging from business arithmetic, through a complete line-up of clerical courses and bookkeeping, to more specialized offerings, such as business law, sales, consumer's education, and business machines.

The college-bound student supplements his training with many excellent math courses, including statistics; and an excellent English department gives all on the course a command of the language that is all-important to success in the field.

In Central's business club many pupils exercise all they have been taught, including salesmanship, and they gain a clearer, more immediate view of the business world.

▲ Right: Sharon Ganaway and Judy Shepherd line up for a little individual help from Mr. Dellinger on a Business Law workbook problem. Business Law is required of clerical students and may be elected by others.

► A new and experimental course this year, statistics, offered pupils the opportunity to study a field that has gained much prominence in the business and other worlds.

▼ Left: Time was when one said, "English—phooey! I'm studying business"; but many large companies have made it clear; a proficiency in and ability to use the English language is absolutely essential. Mrs. Rahmer's 5X English pupils try their skill at a round of grammar exercises. They are Kathi Wood, Lewis Ashton, Fern Williams, Reggie Stiles, Bill Deck, Carolyn Hughes, and Anne Beers.

▼ Right: Social Sciences play an important part in the preparation of the business man or woman of the future; an understanding of our government is the goal of Rose Shull, Marjory McCray, Erma Thompson, Greta Payne, Gloria Imboden, Joyce Rayl, Rose Kamm, John Kloer, and Jeanette Hawkins.

Tomorrow's voters and potential

▼ Miss Pence does over some individual work with Jerry Hey.

vote-getters leave with an understanding of all the citizen's responsibilities

▲ Tony Bushman looks forward to a bright future in government and politics, confident that he has gained a fine prep background.

► Dennis Shields squares off against Nancy Tielker in a round of "baseball" as Mr. Richards' U.S. History class looks on.

► A broad background includes the study of biology. Joan Sliver, Sandra Simpson, and Mary Lou Moser practice their bird recognition.

▼ How do we find happiness? Orientation teacher Mr. Bear talks over a problem put before his class with Mike Derrickson.

The main purpose of education is to train the American student to be a good and responsible member of the society in which he lives—to be a good citizen.

At Central this task is ably performed by the Social Science Department. Through the course of study received here, we learn to perform well the task which is the basis of our society; we learn to be intelligent voters and to inform ourselves about the candidates whom we select to run our government.

We also learn to understand our freedoms which our forefathers won for us and to use them well. We study the structure of our government and compare it with others unlike ours. We study the economy of our nation to prepare us for a future in the business world.

Besides preparing the capable voter, the Social Science Department trains the future leader of our government, the politician. He receives the finest training a prep school can offer in governmental responsibilities.

Art aspirants work hard to get skills, appreciation needed for vocation

To be an artist requires more than talent; it also requires training. Central cannot supply the talent, but it can and does provide a well-rounded course of study to develop the talents of the future artist. He is trained in the fundamentals of sketching, modeling, commercial art, painting, and interior decoration. He learns the correct use of the tools of his trade, he has developed technique, and he has perception.

Proof of the excellent training received at Central comes with the great number of awards Centralites have won in many contests throughout the city. Posters for the charity drives, Fire Prevention Week, and many other occasions have been received with acclaim. The art students are often on hand to help the other school organizations with dance decorations, posters, and publicity work.

As with any profession the artist needs to study more than his specialty. He must be well-versed in English, he must have a practicable knowledge of mathematics, and he must study the social sciences which make him a good citizen.

▲ Pat Jones studies Sue Miller's design technique while Willie Hatch and Ophelia Blevins watch amused. Pat has just finished a dress design.

◀ Miss Hutto instructs Jerry Moore in the art of metal work and Sandra Schiemeyer in rug hooking.

▼ Doug Bateman carries his talents into tempera painting.

▲ Studying another of the liberal arts are Mrs. Huntley's 12 English pupils, Duane Cluders, Irene DeRyk, Grace Smith, Max Miller, Mary Hughes, and Ernestine Turner.

▲ Math teaches the artist about shapes, forms, and dimensions.

▼ Art encourages expression in many media in Mrs. Kinsey's classes.

► Top: Ron Lock completes a model church. Bottom: Miss Spangler's classes study nature's creations; the artist can learn about life.

If there's a family in your future, the responsibilities will be staggering

▼ Joyce Graham and Bonnie Lou Booker get a kick out of sewing.

The future will find more Central girls as housewives than all the other occupations combined. Today's homemaker has the responsibilities of being the modern woman, a cook, mother, hostess, housekeeper, business woman, psychologist, seamstress, nurse, and teacher rolled into one. To be able to handle these tasks, she must have training.

She studies sewing, cooking, child care, home nursing, and family relations to prepare her for the gigantic task which awaits her. Every homemaker must be a home economist; that is to be sufficiently equipped mentally to handle the problems in the home swiftly and accurately, to be able to stretch each dollar to the last mile, and to be able to care for her family efficiently, for her family will be the citizens and homemakers of still another tomorrow. Central helps her meet the challenge.

To train one's children to be good citizens requires a knowledge of the subject, so the homemaker studies social sciences; to be able to express herself, she studies English; to be able to manage the family finances, she studies math. Thus Central prepares the modern teen for her future role in life.

▼ Linda Havens is the "victim" as Shirley Stahl, Brenda Byrd, and Susan Siddall practice hair styling.

Our age calls for trained personnel with original ideas; Central keeps pace in

In this age when ideas and methods are outmoded shortly after they are initiated, a need exists for men and women who can do original thinking and who have a broad background to follow through on their ideas.

Central's department of science includes courses in physics, chemistry, elementary and advanced biology, physical geography, and elementary electricity. A course in general science is also given each Central student as a freshman.

Those interested in this type of career also need a basic foundation in mathematics. This year, for the first time, Central is offering five full years of math, with the addition of a new course in statistical inference and theoretical probability.

Each of these broad classifications sponsors a club which has the general purpose of providing a time, place, and opportunity for interested students to work on projects and have fun with those who share a common interest.

The language of industry is a fascinating one to many of Central's boys

▲ Walt Guenin is up to his elbows in grease as he works on a motor in auto shop. Walt plans to make auto mechanics his career. Long before the year was over, every graduating senior who had majored in auto mechanics had been placed in a job.

Forty-one different courses in shop are taught by eight capable teachers, making a total of 82 class hours of shop every day at Central. These courses range from beginning shop to such specialization as cabinet making or architectural drafting.

The majority of Central's male population is enrolled in one or another of the many courses offered, and many plan to make industrial work a career. The beginning freshman is enrolled in general shop, where he learns the language of industry and the general divisions of shop work. Later he may specialize and plan on making it his life's work, but for the most part he gets a glimpse of the amazing world of industry.

Not only do the future mechanics attend specialized shop courses, but they also study English to enable them to communicate ideas clearly, mathematics for future work and to teach them clear thinking, and social science to make them an acceptable part of the republic. Classes such as physics, chemistry, and general science help them to better understand the world.

A mechanic must be physically fit so Central provides him with gym classes to develop his muscles and co-ordination.

▼ One of the most interesting laboratories at Central is the auto mechanics shop, where the boys learn every phase of what makes an engine tick and what keeps a chassis in smooth running order. Working with an oscilloscope and the shop's tune-up tester to check a "guinea pig," no doubt loaned by some economy-wise faculty member, are Jerry Evans, Jim Walker, and Mr. Surber.

▼ A shop major often uses the skill learned in math classes. Miss Ridgeway gives some individual attention to Jim Garcia and Jerry Jacobs.

We get to develop our particular interests

To offer special opportunities in fields of specific interests and to meet special individual needs are the purposes of the many courses offered at Central which are not a part of the normal curriculum. They are driver training, speech, music, journalism, and the special course.

These provide a varied background for the student and acquaint him with the different aspects of life he may wish to explore or develop. They may also help him to find a career to which he is best suited. Then too, music and speech often uncover hidden talent in a student which might lead to a more happy and profitable future.

In the ungraded rooms pupils who have difficulty, with reading or mathematics for example, are given the opportunity to earn their diplomas at their own rate of learning. In addition to the required courses, they may also take citizenship, health, and shop.

▲ Chuck Kammeyer edits newspaper copy in a test given in 3J, an elective substitute course. Sophomores may learn journalistic techniques in place of composition while studying the usual literature.

▲ The visual method of presentation is used effectively with the special class. Seen watching a movie are Doris Freeman, Jim Wilson, Doug Clauss, Julia Girten, Ray Ramos, Margaret Gallets, Bill Dunham, Sylvia Blevins, Paul Hibler, and Clarettta Moore.

► A physical education program is still an essential and vital part of Central's curriculum. Miss Bartoo, student teacher, instructs tumblers Shelia Calland, Sharon Randolph, Cleosia Howell, Joyce Graham, and Bonnie Booker.

▲ Left: Agnes Polyak, who came to America from Hungary recently, finds herself with less of a handicap in the study of Latin. French and Spanish are also offered at Central.

▲ Right: Dr. Barnhart pays a visit to a Central health class to give a talk on alcoholism. Asking some informal questions are Steve Ayres, Nancy Arkwright, and Louis Collins.

► The Aetna Drive-trainer units have cut the mileage on the actual "road-runner," but there were those days this year when Mr. Bienz led brave souls, such as Linda Roman and David Groves, out into the cold, cruel world.

▼ Right: Among the many body-building workouts a fellow gets in gym class, is the opportunity to work out with weights under supervision. Dal Mathais does a curl and Freddie Kennie a press.

Our extra-curriculars offer a variety of added opportunities for the eager

In a time when almost any aspect of education other than the three R's is under fire as a "frill," it seems appropriate to take a good look at our extra-curriculars.

"Extra-curricular does not mean outside the curriculum; it means built upon the curriculum—an opportunity to apply what is learned in the classroom—and an opportunity to add to interests, understandings, and mental and physical prowess.

Our clubs and activities give us the chance to learn parliamentary procedures, to be responsible for keeping records, and to balance a budget.

Trips, guest speakers, panel discussions, and experiments with new materials and ideas broaden the background we are seeking in high school and paint the horizons of specific fields which interest us.

Our clubs and activities offer a natural opportunity to develop this all-important skill, and herein lies the keyboard—opportunity—extra opportunity.

► Top: Self government is perhaps the most important aspect of learning to be an American. Vital units of Central's student government are the class congresses. Marsha Reed raises a question in Senior Congress as Beckie Williamson, Marilyn Whited, Donna Akers, and Carolyn France listen attentively.

► Middle: Most organizations symbolize their sense of serious membership by their formal initiations. Administering the oath of Press Club are Jeanine Imbody, Sandy Jones, and Ron Jones to initiates Liz Arnold, Ricky Kamm, and Karen Zimmerman.

► Bottom: Even more than learning situations are the various duties of the service clubs, such as those performed daily by library service workers Sandra Simpson, Wanda Swanigan, and Rosalie Mercer.

▲ Left: More than likely, the eager hands of Math Clubbers Rochelle Tieman, Sherry Phipps, Marilyn Whited, and Barb Kammeyer are raised not to vote but to answer or ask a question of some guest speaker.

▲ Middle: Bobbie Thomas, Twirlers secretary, is typical of the many Centralites applying their acquired skills to the real thing.

▲ Right Miss Hutto and Carolyn Matson seem pleased with the treasury.

► Top: Mr. Cecil Rice, principal of Abbott School, was but one of the many guests who spoke to extra-curricular groups this year. He is pictured with Carolyn Lange, Gay Lambert, and Rose Kamm of FTA.

► Middle: To Jerry Hill and Stan Durnell membership in Phy-Chem means, among other things, an added opportunity to experiment, using good equipment and under the able guidance of sponsor, Mr. Horstmeier.

► Bottom: Ed Shepherd runs over the Math Club song for initiation.

▼ Below: Trips and tours are a vital asset. AWC members Elizabeth Rivers, Rose Kamm, Lois Olson, and Dale Boone, tour the Lincoln Life Museum.

A dance is a venture that fattens a treasury and provides entertainment for the student body.

▲ Decorating offers a chance to form and express ideas. It takes work, too, as Carol Cloud, Sherry Phipps, Rochelle Tieman, and Olga Litwinko demonstrate.

► The Art Club's dance backdrop was one of the most striking of the year.

▼ Keeping up with the new approaches in advertising takes all-out effort.

We also learn how to live and work with each other; is it any wonder that extra-curriculars are so vital?

The things we learn are not the only benefits of membership in an extra-curricular; fellowship and fun are also essentials in a teenager's life.

Our clubs participate in many school and community functions, and the planning and work involved cement many close and unforgettable friendships. Thus we learn through co-operation one of the most vital lessons in life—learning to get along and to work with others.

We play, too. We take time out for good times with good, clean fun. We picnic, dance, clown, and eat some more.

Is it any wonder extra-curriculars play such an important part in the life of a Centralite? They provide natural opportunities and vital outlets!

Many organizations present skits at pep sessions, which contain all the vitality, talent, and ham of the vaudeville of yesteryear. These skits are written and presented as group projects. What fun for everyone concerned!

Left: Wanda Trubey rehearses a group of would be Hawaiian dancers for the valentine pep session. The girls who practiced and then donned the grass skirts are Susie Kreigh, Sharon Johnson, and Vicki Reese.

PARTICIPATION AND UNITY

To know her well, you must laugh and dance with her—you must see her perform and cheer her name to victory. You are her talents; and together you make her spirited and proud.

Those off-the-cuff, in-between minutes filled with not-so-small talk among friends

"Thank Heaven for little things," goes the song; and thank Heaven for the healthy vitality of youth and youthful minds which gives us the energy to make each day a well-rounded experience in life. Between all those classes, productions, special events, club meetings, and rehearsals came many minutes that link these highlights of life together. Not wasted minutes, mind you, but off-the-cuff time to enjoy the friends we've made, to scissor in a question on an extra-credit project, or to get some advice on a personal problem.

These are the little gems of life that one might call our informal social life. Most of the time it's some form of talk—a morning chat on the way to school or around the locker, or a heart-to-heart talk with a teacher about the obstacles between one and a higher grade. Just saying hello in the halls adds a bit of human relations that make up the mass of words one hears each day.

We come here to make ourselves more successful and acceptable individuals, and we find that one of the big steps is learning to share the experience with others.

Central's halls are where many of life's important dramas are played. It is there that the pace of school life is most obvious.

▲ Top: The polished beauty of Central's new entrance ways makes our halls fittingly symbolic as open thoroughways to opportunity. They are a gleaming goal of a sleepy-eyed walk to school where we can learn a lot about life in and out of the classroom.

When you become a senior and are ready to go out and face the cold, cruel world:

You begin to get a funny feeling; and just when all that training should give you confidence, you are a little nervous inside. All that talk about how wonderful it will be "to be out" begins to sound a little hollow.

They measure you in numerous ways—your scholastic achievements, your interests, and even the size of your head. Suddenly you realize it won't be long, and you begin to wonder about how that file with your name on it will stack up with prospective employers and preferred colleges.

It's then you think about leaving Dear Old Central and those precious, important years that can only be dreams, reminiscences, and reunion talk in the future. And Central will miss you, too; you were a vital part of her might, you know. Everyone starts looking over the Junior class and the freshmen for the probable leaders. And you? Well, the great big world has its eye on you.

▲ You're independent like Bob Bryan—ready to stand on your own four wheels; a trained leader like John Bey; a serious individual who, like Steve Waikel, finds no time for frivolous pastimes; a wise, brave man with no fear of superstition or the icy glares of freshman boys. Dave Badger and Susie Hessert demonstrate on Friday, February 13.

► Top: Your dinner hour is a veritable roundtable of culture; Dianne Sparks shares with Connie Leach, Ruth Tyndall, Pat Geesaman, Mary Ellen Wass, Sharon Frank, and Sue Beerbower her theory on the reason some Cassanova has two-timed some Madame Dubarry in the Senior Class.

► Bottom: You also have your serious moments as at the Senior Banquet. Bill Garmire, Jim Goldsmith, Wayne Lockwood, Mary Minor, Delilah Fogel, Margaret Hughes, Bill Thomas, and Rose Kamm present a skit.

▲ Right: They measure the size of your head to see how much you've learned. John Kelso undergoes the tape measure as Tharnell Hollins watches.

▼ You are called on many times to pitch in and help the class. Carol Hines, Ethel Vanover, John Bey, and Lanny Christlieb make posters for the "Candy Cane Ball."

Slower, sweeter music made a noticeable come-back at our many Friday night dances

Seldom the excuse "nothin' to do on Friday night" for Centralites. Miss Ingham's calendar attests to a tight schedule of dances.

The Friday night social gatherings, which often follow a football or basketball game, provide us with a place and occasion for a good, healthy time.

Never before have so many teenagers been so accomplished at "the dance." This was a year of modification of rock n' roll steps as more slow numbers found their way to the Top Twenty, and many of the fast numbers had a little something to say.

When it came to color, imagination, and a flair for design, the Friday night record dances set a pace that will motivate decoration committees for years to come. Such decor as that at "Snowball Bounce," "Venesse Waltz," and "Le Beau Chapeau" will long be remembered.

► Top: The music department's "Treble Cleff Twirl" featured a floor show that rocked and entertained the crowd. Jim Milton sang while Calvin Thomas accompanied on the drums.

The class of '59 wove two beautiful spells with 'Candy Cane Ball,' deep sea 'Atlantis'

Couples who attended the 1958 Junior Prom, "Atlantis," and the 1959 Senior Prom, "Candy Cane Ball," waltzed to the dreamy music of Dick Brown and his combo.

"Atlantis" was an imaginary underwater sea world with an octopus, treasure chests, and fish of all sizes, shapes, and colors. Queen Sharon Gaskill was crowned by the 1957 Queen Barbara Ballister. Sharon wore the traditional white gown, and pastel shades adorned her court.

"Candy Cane Ball," this year's Senior Prom, transformed the cafeteria into a confectionary winter wonderland.

◀ Bottom: The auditorium comes to life as the thespians perform.

Central is a Broadway, a midway, and a way to inspiration through its many presentations with each production combining the imagination and talents of the pupils to form bright stars on the marquee of an exciting year.

The dramatics department set the usual pace by putting a near professional touch on numerous plays including the original one-act, "Down in the Valley."

Holiday seasons brought three of the most handsome and inspiring programs Central has ever produced at Christmas, Thanksgiving, and Easter.

The Rededication of the East Building provided the occasion for special programs that vividly emphasized the true nature of Central's might.

The midway came to life twice, thanks to an energetic Sophomore Class and the PTA. The Speechsters followed up with a vaudeville that brought the house down and the whole school pitched in to compete in the "Battle of the Classexes." There were many other occasions when the halls echoed with first nighter and festival excitement.

Special events brought in visitors and added even more zest to this eventful year

The wise person realizes that a complete personality needs some diversions aside routine. To provide these diversions, Central offers a well-rounded schedule of special events.

"Back-to School Night" was for parents—that was when they discovered in two hours what their children did all day.

Assemblies throughout the year introduced Central students to many different subjects. One unique event this year was the "Open House" for the purpose of letting parents and others view our proud new school.

A rededication program was given during school hours for the students. Spirit was boosted by discussions and the displaying of the new banner, "Central Can and Central Will."

Like many others it also offered a regular schedule of concerts so every once in a while, Central was soothed by music that the band and Choir presented.

▲ As the reconstruction began to change the appearance of our building, it also began to transform the boy's gym into a storage room. This transformation resulted in a shortage of bleacher space, but the freshman and sophomore boys, as shown above, were more than willing to sit on the gym floor so that we might have pep sessions. Had it not been for these underclass boys, we would have been without these early rallies.

Yelling at the pep sessions was encouraged by competition between classes and variety

Construction or no construction, mighty Centralites participated enthusiastically in pep sessions among the scattered debris. Different clubs presented both wild and serious skits to boost the team's morale. One, two, three, four was most frequently used as a competition yell and the loudest yelling class received a traveling blue and white ribbon which was finally awarded to the freshman champs.

► Saint Nick, alias Mr. Spuller, tucks the competition yell ribbon at the freshman section after naming them "the best yellers."

▲ Central's coaches did a fine job this year in turning out fine prep athletes. They are Snitz Snider, varsity football and assistant in basketball; Herb Banet, varsity basketball; Robert Dille, freshman coach in front; and Robert Armstrong, reserve coach; Lester "Pete" Williams, track and cross country; and Paul Bienz, assistant track and football coach.

▼ The student managers have worked very hard this year. Theirs is an important role in the Tiger successes. They are Bob Hampton and Doug Hughes in front and Larry Reynolds and Ron Krauskopf.

Coaches, student managers, and yellleaders led the Bengals to another victorious year

In America, where nearly every man, woman, and child is sports-minded, there is hardly any person better-known or more-discussed than the coach. Everyone makes a hobby of his profession; yet everyone realizes what special skills are his.

What coach could be more important than the prep coach who oversees the development of young bodies and attitudes? Central's staff is a credit to the profession; under the guidance of athletic director Mr. Edward Schlecht, it plans a two-fold program concerned with the finest physical education and with winning teams.

Central's staff is also one made up of first class humans. They are noted for their wit and ability to teach. This year saw Mr. Snider retire from varsity coaching and Mr. Bienz step into the job.

▲ The reserve yelleaders are Betty Brewer and Lee Juday in front and Connie Leach, Nancy Favory, Sue Hessert, and Diann Hood.

Between the techniques of the coach, the efforts of the player, and the loyalty of the fan are several vital functions fulfilled by students. The Student Manager has the job of handling equipment, dressing injuries, and making the player as comfortable as possible.

The cheerleaders are a vital liaison between the team and the crowd. Besides leading cheers, they spend many hours planning pep sessions which they direct and for which they write the continuity. They are advised by Miss Margaret Scheumann.

It took teamwork and fine coaching to mould our talent into smooth-running ball clubs

Boys who worked well together and with Coach Banet made what was supposed to be a rebuilding season a success. Teamwork and fine ball handling produced a 15-5 record. In the first games the Tigers had a first down, first shoot policy. It worked against weaker teams but not against state powers like Anderson and South.

Soon, however, the team began to jell; and so it was that the team, while retaining its fast break and flashy brand of ball, began to find other targets. Boys who had shot when there was an open man began to pass the ball. The change became evident, victories came more easily, and shooting percentages went up. The Tigers had learned.

The Reserves won 18!

Coach Armstrong selected a number of reserves from numerous promising candidates and moulded them into a fast-moving, hot-shooting team that worked like a well-precisioned machine. They had height and were not afraid to pass the ball.

These boys lost only two games—the first to Anderson in a 45-43 thriller. Six straight victories followed before the junior Tigers were edged by hot-shooting Elkhart 42-40. The Bengals then found the victory trail as they compiled 12 straight to finish the season 18-2. Lapsley, Hanic, and Turner moved up to varsity to fill the gap left by Bill Boyd, who was edged by the age rule.

The Reserves lost only two, the Freshmen won 'em all, and both teams formed wicked

The "Little Bengals" were anything but little in their hardwood quests this year. The tall freshmen, coached by Mr. Dille, improved over the 17-1 record of last year by bringing home 20 straight victories. They literally walked with ease over every opponent. Their closest game was against Elmhurst when they bounded back from a one-point first quarter deficit to win 34-22. Their average winning margin was 27.6, their greatest output coming against Huntertown when they won 66-19.

Wayne and Art tried to scare off opponents with their knees.

◀ Bottom: The old Central spirit prevailed even after the team bowed to the Archers for the third time during the season. Willie Curry was the first of the team dressed and out to meet the loyal fans who milled about the dressing room chanting, "We're proud of our team!"

▼ As usual Central's band outdid them all in festivity as well as in quality. The members donned shaggy straw hats that matched their many South American numbers. Pictured are Mervin Smith, Dave Badger, Judy Combes, Everedge Kurtz, Bob Van Ryn, and Jim Long.

▲ With a hat and heart full of hope, each Tiger fan teetered on the edge of his seat until the last Central shot of the tourney was fired.

The Sectional comes as a glorious burst of color, a three-day shriek, a matter of life or death

The Hoosier brand of basketball is always superior in skill displayed on the hardwood and as top-notch entertainment, but at Sectional time it rises to a supreme state of competition and showmanship that is almost indescribable.

It is, perhaps, the intensity that prevails which electrifies the air about the Coliseum and turns the meet into a glorious burst of color, a gigantic three-day shriek, a matter of life or death.

This year Central drew a bye and dropped C. C. and Huntertown before losing its one hundredth tangle with South Side.

▲ Top: J. C. Lapsley, Willie Rozier, and Willie Curry show how the Tigers handled scrappy Huntertown.

◀ Tears are an outlet for the disappointment of Sandy Jones, Margaret Imbody, and Gay Lambert.

► Left: Here are Central's sprinters. Frank Smith edges out Tharnell Hollins and Dave Stewart at St. Vincent's Villa. All three have done a really good job for the Tiger's cause, capturing points when we needed them. Hollins also did a good job in the high jump and the 220-yard dash as well as the 100-yard dash. Stewart competes in the 220 and the 100-yard dashes. They are both on the half-mile relay team. Smith is in both of the dashes.

Despite some tough breaks, the cindermen have proved their might on the oval

▼ John Kelso waits to receive the baton from Jack Wims and then bursts ahead of the opponents in the half mile relay in the North-South-Central triangular meet at Northrop Field last year.

Central proved her might on the cinder oval many times throughout the beginning of the 1959 and the 1958 seasons as Tigers in track and field events tried to the best of their abilities to outdo all opponents.

Central posted a mighty half-mile team both seasons, and she came through much stronger in the field events and in the mile in 1959.

The cindermen began the '59 season by trouncing Central Catholic by 72 points and took third place in the North Side Relays while looking much stronger. They proved this as they won over nine schools in the New Haven meet.

Timely and costly mistakes have hurt the team. A dropped baton last year lost a relay and dropped the team from second to third in the sectional. Bob Hawkins' broken foot was a disaster.

Even with this run of bad luck, Coach Williams has still been able to bring a fine track team through the past seasons, and the 1958 sectional saw four Tigers emerge to be sent to the regional. John Kelso was a double winner, taking the 440 and the 100-yard dashes. Tharnell Hollins and T. C. Williams "jumped" through the sectional, taking high jump and broad jump respectively. Cal Thomas placed in the low hurdles.

Three of these four went into the state meet as Kelso, Thomas, and Hollins all placed in the division in which they were entered.

▲ Left: T. C. Williams takes off for his broad jump trial. T. C. averaged about 20 feet each jump and took part in the half-mile relay.

▼ Steve Hanic clears the pole vault bar at 9 feet, 8 inches in a meet at South Side Stadium. Steve has proved his worth in this department.

It seems as though the last few years have held a lot of bad luck for Central's track teams. Last year's team had its share of misfortune in the big meets too. However, on the whole, Central's cindermen showed excellent form and talent which were perfected to skill through the help of fine training and long hours of practice.

Pete and Dada led a record-breaking crosscountry team through a perfect season and our first sectional crown

It has been a record-breaking season for the crosscountry team, under the able instruction of Mr. "Pete" Williams and the record-making pace of Henry "Da Da" King.

The regular season record of 11 wins and no losses was the first time a Central crosscountry team went undefeated. Also new to Central was the sixth place in the state meet.

The crosscountry scoring system of the winning score being the lowest, resulted in four scores of 17 for Central during the regular season. Their highest score was a 27 against Marion who also gave them their closest squeak with only a three-point margin.

Five of the runners managed the two miles in under 10 minutes and 10 seconds which was another record. They were Henry King, 9:33.6; Onofre Gutierrez, 9:52; Raymond West, 10:02; Doug Bateman, 10:06; and Ed Conn, 10:09.

The sectional victory, the first for Central, was won with a 56-point margin between Central and the runner-up.

Two of the low points of the season were when the team lost Nate Alexander, and when it lost Raymond West just before the state meet.

► Top: Central has a good chance in this lone runner Terry Henline.

Central fans saw thrilling, tough football as the 'Snitzmen' took on top state talent

Cold hands and feet did not keep Central fans from attending football games filled with some thrilling and tough action during the last season.

The 46 gridiron men challenged a lot of the top talent in the state and found their two win, five loss, and one tie campaign hard playing for its full extent.

The Bengals started off on the right foot by defeating the Concordia Cadets 38-12. They won their next city game, and squeaked past South Side 6-0 as the result of an Archer fumble and Central touchdown late in the last quarter. Then the roof fell in as the North Side eleven won in a close 16-13 contest.

Out-of-town teams seemed to hold a hex on the Snitzmen as they lost all four of their out-of-town games. They were Elkhart, 27-0; North Central, 14-7; Richmond, 27-0; and Muncie Central, 17-7.

The Tigers tied Central Catholic 7-7 in the final game for second spot in the city.

▲ It was quite a tangle up when they got him. Here three unidentified Central reserve players let a downed North Side player take a deep breath.

► Halftime may be when the team takes a break, but for the spectators it is the time to look around and see who came, wander over to the rival's bleachers, or get up and just stretch. Even those who want more football find halftime nice for getting some food to sustain them for the rest of the game. Here getting that nourishment are Centralites Ron Jones and Bob Romanowski at the South Side game in their stadium.

▼ Even though they only managed to eke out one win in five starts, these boys picked up some valuable experience that will help them if they go on to varsity next year. The reserve team is coached by Mr. Robert Armstrong and are front row: Louis Collins, Otha Bright, Harold Hopkins, Ron Krauskopf, and Frank Harris; back row: Freeman Chandler, Don O'Brien, Jim Wells, Jim McGowan, Wordell Wespon, and Ocie Turner.

▲ A South Side player is stopped by Bob Tinker as Richard Bates (39) runs in to assure the down. In the background is Percy Moore (40).

▲ Winning four and losing only one, the freshman football team, coached by Mr. Robert Dille, took the city freshman championship. This championship is the second one in a row for the Dillemen. These 19 little winning Bengals are first row: Ned Moore, Joe Brooks, Mike Darson, Bob Williams, Wally Christ, Mike Derrickson, Freddie Kenny, Bob Thomas, and Joe Brown; back row: Jim Draunesy, Sam Kelsey, Arthur Woods, Jimmy Goodson, Rodney Haywood, Sam Turner, Fresh Wright, Art Stalhart, Tom Bodhe, and Jim Rhinehart.

▼ "Whoa there don't rush off!" This Concordia player came to a quick stop and was downed by Central's Roger Ember, head bowed, Bob Tinker, and an unidentified player. Coming in to help is Jim Goldsmith of Central. Fast, rough action of this type was typical of the season.

The tennis team with Coach McCory initiated a competitive system for rank

A minor sport attracting major attention is Central's tennis team, which after suffering through a losing season last year, has started off with a promising team this year.

Though the tennis team began on the wrong foot, Mr. J. T. McCory, coach, has not had enough time to prove himself or the team in the beginning of his first season.

This year also saw the return of five boys from last year's squad, which coupled with 10 recruits this year, can make for a lot of material from which to draw a very rough first seven.

Also new this year is a system for position on the team list of one through 15. A player may challenge either of the first two players ahead of him. An example is player 13 may challenge 12 or 11, but not 10.

The new system was introduced by Mr. McCory.

Central's GAA girls work for points while packing seven seasons into one year

Central's Girls Athletic Association is one of the most bustling organizations in the school, providing the physical and mental outlet and development a growing girl needs.

Slick organization under the capable and beloved leadership of Sis Arnold is the answer to how the girls accomplish so much in one year. Responsible student officers are also a necessity. This year they were Judy Cooper, president; Pia Raudsep, secretary; and Nancy Whited, point recorder.

The GAA girls run through seven seasons a year with volleyball, dancing, kinball, basketball, tumbling, swimming, and softball. Kinball is a Central concoction of soccer, speedball, and basketball especially designed for Central's gym.

A gal can come out for all of the activities or for just the ones that interest her most. She gets points in tumbling and swimming for completing required activities and in the other sports for making a team and by putting in a required number of nights. For her expended energies she gets loads of fun and numerals, a plain letter, a sweater, and chevrons as they are earned.

We went 'Around the World in 80 Minutes' at the Booster's Valentine pep session

The Booster Club took the entire student body and faculty "Around the World in 80 Minutes," during the annual Valentine pep session. More than 40 club members participated in the various skits from countries such as Holland, France, Spain, Italy, Egypt, Brazil, Japan, and Hawaii. Three cool cats from the United States, Centralus, Centrali, and Centralic, who took the imaginary journey, received a token from each country as they continued around the world. Our varsity athletes had to sing, do the hula, eat pizza, roll eggs with their noses, etc., before receiving a box of candy.

Howard Johnson's Restaurant was the scene of the annual banquet, "Silver Bells." A visit from Old St. Nick was the highlight of the affair.

The Booster Club consists of the top pupils in school. Anyone who wants to be a member must first submit an application to the club's adviser Mr. Griggs. They are then screened by the council, which consists of three seniors, two juniors, and one sophomore. On Recognition Day the new members are "bibbed" by the senior members making them official Boosters.

Lettermen's Club gives our boys higher appreciation of athletic sportsmanship

The Lettermen's Club, or Varsity Club, is another important part of mighty Central. It was organized four years ago by a group of athletes and was sponsored by Murray Mendenhall, Jr., for the purpose of furthering athletics, worthy activities in school, and sportsmanship. The Lettermen's Club is made up of boys who have played varsity sports and have earned a letter in basketball, football, tennis, or track.

Mr. Dille, adviser of the Varsity Club, has through his hard work and thoughtfulness, given the Lettermen a higher appreciation of athletics and sportsmanship.

▲ To further athletics, worthy school activities, and sportsmanship are the purposes of Lettermen Thomas, Rozier, Crosby, Hogan, White, Bateman, Ember, Young, Reynolds, Henline, and Griggs row one; and Curry, Goldsmith, Thomas, Bates, Tilker, Linton, Moore, Armstrong, Conn, Keim, and Durnell row two.

▼ Left: Giving the Varsity Club members a higher appreciation for the meaning of athletics and sportsmanship have been Jim Keim, vice president; Jim Goldsmith, secretary; Percy Moore, treasurer; Bill Thomas, president; and Mr. Robert Dille, adviser.

▼ Right: The Lettermen, along with the Doodlebugs, sponsored a successful car wash on a cold Saturday, holding the proceeds for the Caldron in case of a budget shortage. Lettermen, Doug Bateman, washes the tail light; and Doodlebug, Jim Snyder, sprays water over the top of the car as Mr. Tricosas, Doodlebug adviser; and Mr. Dille, Lettermen adviser; lend a helping hand.

Doodlebugs are a tightly interwoven group with a common desire to improve Central

Probably the club with the funniest name is the Doodlebug Club. But don't let the name fool you; it is one of the hardest-working organizations at Central.

The Doodlebugs sponsor an annual picnic in the spring. Last fall they sponsored a successful car wash along with the Lettermen. They also donated flowers to the Memorial, washed down the statues of the Memorial, and did quite a lot sign painting.

The club's very capable sponsor is Mr. George Tricosas, for whom all the boys have the greatest respect. The officers are Jim Goldsmith, president; Jim Snyder, vice-president; Bill Thomas, sergeant at arms; and Jerry Gaskill and Bill Crouch, secretaries.

The club was started to boost a lagging school spirit; it is young and small but will grow as Central grows to bigger and better things. The club is made up of members tightly interwoven in an atmosphere of fellowship, having a true desire to help Central.

Anthony Wayne initiates withstand torture to join the club, then discover new historical experiences in belonging

Initiation time in Anthony Wayne Club is known throughout the school. On the "big day" the initiate must go through a hectic day and rigorous tests at night. New experiences pertaining to history are then available to him. This year the club visited the Lincoln Life Museum to learn more about Abe Lincoln.

The highlight of AWC is the biannual trip to either Washington D. C. or New York. Smaller trips are taken too; this year the members went to Detroit and visited Greenfield Village.

AWC's mock trial of a Centralite—this year for wasting his education—is given for the student body during the day and for parents at night. Dale Boone was found guilty during the day, innocent at night.

AWC, which stimulates and enlarges interest in history at Central, is sponsored by its founder, Mr. Clifford Richards.

The Student Council sets policies to lead Central's 1400 voters

The most important policy-making organization at Central is the Student Council whose members are elected by homerooms. The cabinet, composed of the officers and eight members, meets to discuss the events to bring before the entire Council.

The organization is headed by a fine staff of officers. They are Ed Shepherd, president; Bill Garmire, vice president; Beckie Williamson, secretary; and Fred Murray, sergeant-at-arms.

The main projects of the Council this year were the Christmas Baskets, a candy sale, a dance, the polishing of Central's many trophies, and a Mr. and Miss Courtesy contest.

FBLA teaches confidence in abilities and stresses clear, positive thinking

Growth is essential to any active organization. Growth in numbers, growth in services, and growth in stature are only a few of the goals of the Future Business Leaders of America. It has been said, and is worth repeating, that an organization is only as good as each of its members make it. With this in mind, the importance of each individual member in the growth of FBLA is emphasized. Each chapter, state and local, and thus each individual member, makes the chartering of new chapters one of the prime goals.

BUSY, BUSY, BUSY . . . are members of FBLA. One of the purposes of the Future Business Leaders of America is "To develop character, train for useful citizenship, and foster patriotism." Each year FBLA is represented by student delegates at the National Conference of Citizenship. These delegates are accompanied by an adult representing the United Business Education Association.

"I believe in my own ability to work efficiently and to think clearly, and I pledge myself to use these abilities to make a better place for everyone," states the creed of the Future Business Leaders of America.

Tomorrow's business leaders must be capable workers and leaders. They must believe in their abilities to work efficiently and to think clearly. Through FBLA chapters, they learn clear and positive thinking. They become aware of the necessity of these qualities to good business.

FTA provided another year of fine programs with movies, speakers, and panels on education

The purpose of Future Teachers of America, a national organization, is to increase interest in the profession and to give pupils, who have the interest, an opportunity to investigate the field.

This year the group saw several fine movies on teaching. Other meetings offered speakers and panel discussions. For one of these Cecil Rice, principal of Merle J. Abbott, was the honored guest. He talked about the "education act."

For the first meeting of the year, FTA members brought apples to start things off with "an apple for the teacher."

Highlighting the group's activities for the year was a Friday night, after-game dance, "Snowball Bounce," which they gave with FBLA. Large snowmen decorated the backdrop.

Mr. Victor Stech and Miss Catherine Jackson are the group's advisers.

A highly successful season made our thespians one of the busiest companies on the boards

This year our dramatists spent many hours laboring to produce five excellent plays for Centralites. If one happened to be at school in the late or wee hours, he would see the sleepy-eyed actors practicing to make the plays letter-perfect. The results of all this toil were "The Mystery of Mouldy Manor," "Down in the Valley," "Our Miss Brooks and the Christmas Carol," "Annie Get Your Gun," and "Rebel Without a Cause."

The production of a play requires much talent and training as well as elbow grease; the members of the department also designed their own sets, provided their own props, and designed and obtained their own costumes, all under the direction of Mrs. Helen Lee.

Besides presenting plays for Centralites, the dramatics department also performed for several outside groups, staged a play and discussion for the PTA, and took part in a panel discussion at "Rededication" to revive lagging spirit.

The speechsters hit the road to success in big meets, the vod-vil, and their dance

The Speechsters wound up this year with a proud record. Among their accomplishments were several firsts collected in stiff competition in meets, such as those held at Peru, Ball State, Howe, and New Haven.

The troop that journeyed to Peru won the second place trophy. Chuck Stevens gave his "Last Mile" in the district contest and won a first and a chance to go on to state.

One of the high points of a year of successful entertainment was the department's Vod-vil, "Video Varieties," which had the audience rolling in an aisle of South Pacific palm trees.

Working with the English Department, NFL put on "Silhouettes of Spring," a Friday-night dance.

One earns the honorary membership in NFL—which was established in 1929 "to honor superior performance and to improve the poise, personality, and speaking ability of its members" by collecting points through participation in various meets.

▲ National Forensic League officers this year were Pat Mossbarger, president; Onofre Gutierrez, vice-president; and Neda Cambron, secretary.

► Top: The Speech Vod-Vil again featured many talented students in a vast array of acts. Even the emcees put on quite a show. Onofre Gutierrez and Doug Bateman are hammering it up between numbers as they emcee at the gala affair.

Here participants are given a few minutes in which to prepare a speech on a given topic, unknown to them before this time. ## Press Club serves as a happy diversion to over-worked Spotlight, Caldron staffs Surprise birthday parties, initiations, meetings, and dancing at bi-weekly Press Club meetings gave loyal publications workers a chance to let off steam.

The Press Club had a very active year, meeting in the homes of various members to discuss the business at hand. Two publications picnics were staged in the spring and in the fall. The highspot of the season was the club's annual banquet which was at Manachio's Restaurant, April 21.

The officers for the year were Jeanine Imbody, president; Ron Jones, vice president; and Sandy Jones, secretary.

A mutual love of art and an eagerness to express oneself creatively build fellowship in the Art Club

Zeal and hard work, along with brushes and paint, help to make our Art Club great. The purpose of this club is to expand its member's cultural background and to improve artistically our school environment.

The club meets on the first and third Monday of each month. Guest speakers, travel talks, museum trips, a local Art Exhibit, and art appreciation help to broaden our interests. The annual Art Club party for students taking Art I provided an interesting time for everyone.

In December, trimming the school Christmas tree in the Cafeteria, and then having a gift exchange afterwards was quite exciting. "Viennese Waltz", the annual Valentine dance after the South Side basketball game, was a terrific success. Visiting the home of an art teacher provided an enchanting time for the Club. The club's annual picnic was at Miss Acker's trailer in May.

Increased membership and up-and-going programs made this a prosperous year for Biology Club

Prosperous and wonderful '58 and '59 began for the Biology Club with the initiation of the largest number of new candidates ever to come into the club at one time.

The first of many outside activities for the nature lovers was a combination hike and picnic at Pokagon State Park last fall. The amateur biologists also ventured on field trips to area parks. Franke Park was the scene of an early morning excursion by sleepy-eyed members, and another picnic was at Lawton Park.

Talks given by excellent speakers highlighted the monthly meetings. At the November meeting slides, depicting the wild flowers of Indiana, were shown. Mr. Ronald Lewton, a biology teacher at North Side, spoke on radiation biology; and Miss Blanche Hutto showed slides of her travels to Guatemala at the January meeting.

The annual all-day trip was at Sand Dunes Park.

▲ Officers for the second semester were Carolyn France, point recorder; Dennis Shields, vice president; Carol Cloud, president; Mary Lou Moser, publicity chairman; Pat McCarthy, secretary; and David Cloud, treasurer.

► Top: A large turn-out gathered to listen to Mr. Ronald Lewton from North Side tell about radiation and its effects on the world of vegetation. They literally peppered the speaker with intelligent questions that sent him back to Redskin territory with a high respect for Central's would-be biologists.

► Middle: Examining the equipment Mr. Lewton brought with him are Carol Cloud and Nancy Whited. The instrument measured degrees of radiation.

► Bottom: The best way to learn about and enjoy nature is to be out amongst it. Snow, sleet, or hail do not hold down Miss Spangler and the healthy members of Biology Club. They made the rounds of the local parks and took other field trips in all kinds of weather. Seen examining the bark of a tree along the Saint Marys River are Miss Spangler, Karen Trubey, Mex Lieberenz, and Jane France. Perhaps they were looking for signs of Dutch Elm disease which is taking such a heavy toll in Fort Wayne, or is that the wrong kind of bark?

Math Club, the oldest high school organization in the city, celebrated its 45th. Anniversary

Our Math Club has the distinction of being the oldest club in Fort Wayne, and this year it celebrated its 45th anniversary at the "five year" banquet. Mr. Fred Croninger, founder of the club and former principal, was guest speaker for the event which was in the YWCA cafeteria. Former members of the club were guests, and present members Marilyn Whited, Mary Minor, Jerry Gaskill, and Ricky Kamm, were student speakers for the affair.

The second big event of the year was the club's dance. The members worked diligently on decorations for "The Madhatter's Ball."

Various members of the club were responsible for giving talks and demonstrations at the monthly meetings.

The club ended the successful year with its annual picnic at a city park with a large number of the members in attendance.

Miss Leona Plumanns and Miss Dorothy Ridgway advise the club.

Phy-Chem's first year was one truly expanding the curricular

The first full year of the new Phy-Chem Club found its members making constant after-school use of the lab to develop special projects.

The club toured General Electric, taking interested members of science classes along as their guests. They saw the experimental lab and the fascinating sound room.

The also brought in several speakers, showed films, played recordings, and raised some money with a dance.

Central relies on her service workers for a smooth-running, efficient system

Assisting Central's fine adult staff are many pupils who give up their free periods to work in the main office, the treasurer's office, the library, study hall, and for teachers. These clerical helpers perform countless duties that keep Central "rollin' smoothly along." These students learn to accept responsibilities and various methods of record keeping and organization.

Perhaps two of the busiest crews this year were the library service workers and those in Mrs. Watson's office. Mrs. Vallance and her gals set up the new library from stacks and stacks of books and other materials in the middle of the floor with nary a complaint.

When the flu hit this year, it dumped an enormous job onto the already busy attendance crew. Keeping track of "the bug" was a tremendous job.

Study hall procedure depends on the reliability of numerous gals who are generous with their time, and there were countless other jobs performed daily by the service workers, such as running errands, filing, and acting as receptionists.

A little pure fun comes into their lives, when the service workers gather for their Christmas party.

The whole Caldron story can't be written yet; a small staff has been giving the book its all

Memo: April 26, 1959: "We have worked very hard; but after a long, troublesome year with several weary months, we are in serious deadline trouble. Excepting a pat on the back of Business Manager Sharon Rose and her staff, we feel, at present, 'the less said, the better.' "

▼ Sandy Jones, editor (left), was the veritable right arm of the paper. When things got the roughest, Sandy pushed everyone to smoother sailing. No one ever took the Spotlight more seriously or was more beloved by a staff. Jeanine Imbody, student adviser (middle), finished as editor early and stayed to give much-valued help. She was teen editor of the Journal-Gazette also. Gay Lambert, editor (right), piloted the last eight issues after serving as copy and managing editors. She was noted for her terse editorial policy.

It was a big year for the spotlight staff, publishing from its new, spacious quarters

Many long and value-packed hours were spent by the members of the Spotlight staff during the year in preparing the weekly and special issues that were printed.

The biggest project on the agenda was the "construction issue," a 12-page account of the reconstruction of the East Building, which was the second largest paper ever published by a Spotlight staff.

New and spacious quarters helped to lighten the spirits of the staff as deadlines pressed on their shoulders. The old furniture donned a new face when the staff devoted a weekend to painting them in pastel colors.

The business staff has more than held its own this year due to the support of its faithful Centralite subscribers and a hard-working advertising staff which has brought in more ads this year than in any previous year.

This has been a year of staff rebuilding and reorganization for the paper which has set its sights on many opportunities for improvement in the years to come.

▲ Nothing is more important on a paper than expert copy reading. Performing the task for the Spotlight are Gay Lambert; Ron Jones, managing editor; and Patsie Dorton, assistant copy editor.

► Top: Judy Combes and Willie Gray got the paper off to a blazing start from the advertising standpoint; and a freshman, Bob Finton, pushed it far over its goal the second semester with a sizzling sales policy. ## The Friendship Club offers our gals a chance to cultivate comradship in varied activities

No need for a young lady to be lonely at Central—not when there are active groups like Friendship Club to join. These gals really put on the steam this year with a potato chip sale and the sale of senior name cards.

Since the purpose of the club is to provide an atmosphere for making friends, this is a partying group. They had a Halloween party, a Christmas party, and a pizza party, among others.

They learn things together, too. Miss Hutto gave them a demonstration on gift wrapping, and Mr. William Bennett of TWA airlines told them about careers as airline hostesses. Mrs. Doris Sauerwein is the adviser of the club.

The Spanish Club was formed this year with a four-fold purpose and lots of fun

In forming its constitution in its first year, the Spanish Club wrote into its constitution a four-fold purpose: 1. to encourage participation of Spanish students in school affairs; 2. to practice the ideals and techniques of democracy; 3. to foster a spirit of co-operation between pupils and faculty; and 4. to introduce the subject of Spanish and its activities to Central.

The club presented a scene from a Spanish Christmas by breaking a piñata and distributing its goodies in December. The members met to converse in Spanish and to dance and play Spanish games.

Would-be Modern Music Masters must face a triple initiation, but they reap prestige

Shakey-kneed and stary-eyed, many sophomore Band members enter the Modern Music Masters' Club. The three initiations, prerequisites of joining 3M's, as the club is popularly known, are really unforgettable experiences.

After the new member establishes at least a B average in Band and a C average in his other subjects, he is required to play a solo before the 3M officers and to prove himself worthy of becoming a member. All going well, he then participates in a very impressive formal initiation, after which, with club card and pin in hand, he is a member of the Modern Music Masters of Central High School.

Made up entirely by upperclassmen in Band, this group usually takes a one-day trip each year. Mr. Elbert Stodden, director of Central's instrumental group, is the adviser.

▼ Facing a bright future with music are the upperclassmen of the Band and orchestra who have earned membership in the revered Modern Music Masters. They are front row: Connie Leach, Nancy Whited, Barb Beerbower, Donna Kowalczyk, Judy Combes, Ken Gilbert, and Bill Crouch; middle row: Sharon Rose, Jeanette Hendricks, Nancy Tielker, Barbara Joyce, Mary Ellen Wass, Pat Geesaman, Mel Busse, Dick Graft, Sue Beerbower, and Dianne Sparks; back row: David Cloud, Bob Bailey, Gordon Bainbridge, and Paul Mays.

It takes a lot of practice and poise to twirl and toss batons that well

The practicing every Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday, and at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday and Thursday before the games, paid off as the Twirlers pranced through the football and basketball seasons pleasing the crowds at both the games and pep sessions.

All of the formations used by the Tigerettes were devised by Mr. Stodden and Joyce Snoke, majorette.

For the Twirlers it is not all work but also the fun at the meetings. Also this year they shared a dance, "Treble Cleff Twirl," with the Band and Choir.

The big event of the year was their picnic at Sweeney Park May 19.

▲ Posing prettily on the steps are Central's Marching Tigerettes.

The Dance Band practices in the morning to take top ratings and make sweet music

Before school several mornings each week, Central heard twenty sleepy-eyed musicians running through "Solitude," "Lullaby of Birdland," "Mood Indigo," "Firefly," "Star Dust," and "Caravan." Trombones, trumpets, saxes, a bass violin, piano, and a full set of drums were blending and contrasting at delightful intervals, that combined to give the pleasing effects for which the Dance Band is noted.

The Dance Band, under the able direction of Mr. Stodden, added their typical magic to the Cauldron "Battle of the Classexes" and the Band dance, as well as to pep sessions and other school projects.

"Muskrat Ramble" and "Moonglow" earned the group a first division rating in the first area dance band contest at Harrison Hill Junior High School in February.

▼ Below: Drilling and drilling in the wee hours of the morning are members of the Dance Band and director Mr. Stodden.

▲ Mr. Stodden's faith in his groups, such as Band, Dance Band, Orchestra, and various others sees them through the endless rehearsals, both early and late practices, and those horrible Monday's when everyone would rather be doing anything but playing his horn. Because of his expert guidance and patience, the Band, Dance Band, Orchestra, solo groups, and Twirlers are consistently too-notch.

▲ Practising with Mr. Wetzel are members of the girl's trio, Jeanette Watkins, Ruth Tyndall, and Nancy Pogue. Several such ensembles practiced and performed together this year.

Row three: Henrietta Blevins, Geraldine Shields, Lucinda

A new director and a healthy attitude put the choir on the road to excellence

The beginning of the school year found the choir without a director; and the administration, wanting someone tops who would build the group, went shopping. Meanwhile Mr. Stodden, Band director, doubled with the vocal work.

Everyone considered the school fortunate when Mr. William Wetzel from Adams School was acquired. He and the vocalists faced a heavy financial deficit, and the improvement of the choir was noticeable throughout the year.

Training groups became more rigorous, and a friendly but healthy competitive spirit came alive. New organization gave the group structure.

Donning their black robes or their light blue formal wear, they blossomed forth in numerous appearances at school and about the city.

Several outstanding ensembles were formed. They included the Centralaires, a group of boys; the Centralettes, a girl's ensemble; a trio; a quintet; and a barbershop quartet. They entered the district music contest and devoured the judges critiques. This is significant of the new attitude which was pleasantly obvious this year.

They march, they play, they travel, they sell; they're about the busiest bunch you'll find

It's a marching band! It's a basketball band! It's a concert band! It's a super band! Yes, our seventy Tigers and Tigeresses, under the direction of Mr. Stodden, are a very versatile group. They not only play at our pep sessions, basketball and football games, but march in parades, present concerts at home and around the state, win marching, concert, and solo contests, as well as selling concert tickets and candy.

Their long hours of practice before and after school made "Phedre," "The Seafarer," "Rio Rita," "Venus," "My Happiness," "Etude Boogie," and "Rift Interlude" familiar to the ears of all Centralites in '59. These melodies and many others were played by the Tigerland Band at their six home concerts and in North Manchester, Warsaw, Pen Township, and South Bend on the band trip April 16, 17, and 18.

◀ Top: A sleepy-eyed yet alert crew practices early in the morning.

◀ Bottom: Polish those brightly, boys. Bill Crouch and Chuck Kammeyer clean coat hangers Band members collected and sold to a drycleaner.

▲ Mr. Stodden counts for violinists Joyce Marquart, Melba Kerr, and Barbara Barker. These gals practice every day from 11:20 to noon.

▲ Officers of the Band this year are Bruce Marquart, vice-president; Pat Geesaman, secretary; and Mary Ellen Wass, president.

► One of the highlights of the ball games is the snappy, ringin' music of the Band. When it came to military precision, they were the most disciplined group to ever stride through the lye on a ball field. They are shown swinging at one of the ball games at North Side.

▼ A poised group even while at ease the Band waits on the sidelines of the field for halftime and a chance to strut their stuff. Once on the field and under the lights, those bristly white plumes will wave above snappy formations in Blue and White.

The PTA learned about us from study groups, set up its midway, and had open house

Central's PTA took a long look at curriculum this year while sponsoring several special events. Areas of general subject matter came into focus, the dramatics pupils staged a play on teen-age problems, and "Curriculars Versus Extra-curriculars" was the topic of one of those Tuesday night study groups.

One of the gayest of nights this year was the Fall Festival, an evening on the midway which raised money for worthy projects such as the new conference room furniture.

As host of the Open House, the PTA helped officially to open a new era for Central. Officers this year were Mrs. William Gaskill, president; Mrs. Arthur T. Rose, first vice-president; Mr. Richard Bear, second vice-president; Mrs. Charles Durnell, secretary; Mr. D. H. Cloud, treasurer; and Mrs. Harry Whited and Mrs. Leslie Nuzum, members-at-large.

▼ Study Groups were the main feature of the year for the PTA. The busy committee chairmen Mrs. Cleatus Deck and Mrs. Gerald Dolin pose with Mr. Spuller and PTA president Mrs. W. R. Gaskill.

▼ One of the social highpoints of the year is the PTA Potluck. Olga Litwinko watches as Naomi Matters serves Mrs. H. L. Ruby. Mrs. Gaskill helps herself.

A welcome to Central is given to the freshman parents by Mr. Welbaum, woodshop teacher.

▲ The dramatics department took part in one of the most successful PTA meetings of the year when they presented "High Pressure Area," a play for the parents and teachers, who turned out in unusually large numbers for the production. The group also carried on many discussion groups on such subjects as extra-curriculars and various questions concerning academics.

► Top: Digging right into the delicious food at the PTA potluck are Mrs. Jacob Garmire, Mr. Jacob Garmire, Tommy Deck, Mr. Cletus Deck, and Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Combes.

► Bottom: Steady brother dear, is what Cheryl Tilker says as she winds up with the sponge at the PTA Festival sponge toss booth. One takes it that brother Bob got it right between the eyes.

▼ Back-to-School night was a hectic rush except for the brief lull offered at "noon" in the cafeteria.

OPPORTUNITY AND YOU

Alone she is but stones; with her staff, a waiting opportunity; but in the end she is the essence of you. If you be a lone wolf, she is lonely, needing your vital sense of membership

A. T. LINDLEY
Superintendent

PAUL SPULLER
Principal

Mr. A. T. Lindley, superintendent of schools, made the 6-3-3 plan a reality this year and has accelerated the rehabilitation and construction of the city's education plants. Here at Central, Principal Paul Spuller steered the helm for his fifth year—a vitally progressive year for Central.

The deans and the guidance directors handled all that came to them with the skill that has made them an effective instrument in the molding of our lives, and Miss Adams has directed the freshman program which has established its merit after only two years.

Mrs. Watson's vital records of who is here and who isn't kept the needed tab on Central's population, and a top-flight office staff performed endless tasks for students and teachers alike.

The main feature in the school, our superb faculty, has seen a bustling year. Teaching, counseling, and the sponsoring of activities have found them full of life, and this is the best way to picture them—in action!

Handling the office's business and helping teachers and students alike, the secretaries had a busy year. They are Mrs. Mildred Kueneke, secretary; Mrs. Winifred Omerod, treasurer; and Mrs. Betty Beerbower, secretary.

Counseling, advising, helping, directing, disciplining, giving information, making out programs, and all that goes with these things make up the job of the Central deans and guidance directors. ▲ Top: Mr. Wetzel plays the organ at the faculty Christmas party in the main office. Mrs. Omerod and Mickey join in; Mrs. Huntley listens. Above: Mr. Virts enjoys a snack with Mr. Weilbaum and Mr. Spuller.

► Left: This faculty Santa is really Mr. Davis. Right: Mrs. Sauerwein and Miss Standish stop for a short chat in center hall at noontime. Bottom: One office birthday called for the lace tablecloth and a three-layer cake. Around the table are Mr. Virts, Mr. Schlecht, Mrs. Beerbower, Mrs. Kuenke, Mrs. Omerod, Mrs. Watson, and Miss Ingham. Standing are Mr. Spuller and Mr. Rowe.

▲ It was a cold day when the Lettermen and the Doodlebugs washed cars to benefit the Cauldron budget. Mr. Tricolas polishes a hubcap.

▲ Central's home basketball games go about as smoothly as such an exciting sport will allow. Mr. Edward Schlecht, athletic director, organizes a staff of the men teachers who work at the games. Shown in the photo are Mr. Dellinger, Mr. Schlecht, and Mr. Levy.

To the custodial staff the new building means more work to do but in much nicer conditions

Perhaps no group was happier to see reconstruction come to an end than was the custodial staff, even though the last stages meant even more hustle and bustle than ever.

Mr. Raymond Meshberger headed his staff through another rough year; but the gentlemen, and the ladies too, always had a pleasant smile and a kind word for the faculty and the pupils.

The "new" building provided many custodial conveniences, such as more storage for equipment on each floor; but it also increased the work load with many more black boards to wash and broad, tile floors to polish, for two examples. Several times the crew gave the place a complete spring house cleaning before we had company "en masse."

There were less gripes about the heating this year as each room had its own thermostatic control.

Central has as pleasant a "chow" line as one could hope to find with tasty food daily to match the broad, kind smiles that serve it.

▲ Seen feeding the incinerator which consumes tons of waste paper about school is a well-known fellow, "Woody" Woodward. "Tony" Bode, engineer; and Clara Squires and Cenia Monroe, matrons, are notoriously camera shy and are not pictured. Fireman Chester Samples is also missing.

► Top: The pleasant aroma from the cafeteria was brewed by front row: Mrs. Fast, Mrs. Meyers, Miss Schoenemann, Mrs. Meshberger, and Mrs. Wagner; row two: Mrs. Rehling, Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Kerns, Mrs. Brown, and Mrs. Dalzell.

► Middle: George Reardon, Marion Eisaman, and Frank Carroll are three more hard workers on the custodian staff.

► Bottom: Familiar faces that we seldom know by name are Kenneth Van-deran, Roland Gregory, Raymond Meshberger, and Arthur Platt. These gentlemen are part of the crew which keeps our building in tip-top condition. Mr. Meshberger is in charge of the custodians.

▲ June Murray was proclaimed Valedictorian of the class of '59 with a four-year scholastic average of 95.34. She began her studies on the college prep course and finished with a business concentration. She was most active in service work.

▲ Jerry Gaskill, Salutatorian, compiled a 94.33 average. Jerry, who majored in math and science, has been one of the most active members of the class and was chosen by its members to lead them three times. He won in a national talent search in science this year.

▲ Scholarship steals the spotlight this year with the twelve members of the Four-year Honor Roll. Seated at the center table of distinction at the first honor banquet were front row: Beckie Williamson, Lois Olson, Mary Ellen Wass, Ruth Tyndall, and Rose Kamm; row two: Stan Durnell, Mary Minor, Marilyn Whited, Martha Morris, and Ed Shepherd. To make the Four-year Honor Roll, a senior must have compiled a grade average of 90 per cent or above.

▲ Sharon Frank, a Varsity Cheerleader, and active Centralite was chosen by her classmates as Best Girl Citizen.

▲ Confidence and humility in perfect blend and balance resulted in Marilyn Whited being chosen The Girl Most Likely to Succeed.

▲ Besides being Salutatorian, Jerry Gaskill represents his class as Best Boy Citizen and The Boy Most Likely to Succeed.

The Class of '59, really shining after four years of polish, names its true leaders

The Class of '59 has been a quality class throughout its four years at Central. From the time its members strolled in as freshmen, it has made its mark in activities and in scholarship.

Working well with its advisers, Mrs. Ladonna Huntley and Mr. Gordon Fatzinger, this class has functioned with the mark of thorough planning and the best in taste. The Junior Prom of 1958 was a dazzling spectacle of shimmering foil formed to create an underwater "Atlantis." Its Sophomore Carnival was a big success financially and truly created a "Magic Midway." "Candy Cane Ball" was a winter formal which marked a gala end to the group's social functions.

All this has contributed to the poise, confidence, and eagerness which have been added to the personalities that were once boys and girls. The major role, of course, has been played by the scholastic endeavor they have made here. Like so many graduates before them, they leave a vacuum that the Junior Class must rush to fill. It is a mighty challenge!

▲ Leading the Class of '59 through its final lap of all-important activities were Jerry Gaskill, president; Sharon Frank, secretary; and Jim Goldsmith, vice-president.

'The World Outside' was a grand climax for juniors after their year of hard work

This year's juniors can tell their grandchildren that travel off to the far-a-way planets of Venus and Mars that they went to "The World Outside" way back on May 2, 1959.

The prom was a grand climax to a year of planning, hard work, and perseverance. Room 12, filled with modern mobiles hanging from the lights, posts, long black strips of glass, and even dainty, glittering glass lanterns, became a second home to many of the toiling juniors.

"Annie Get Your Gun" gathered crowds at both performances November 24 and 25. Ann Beers as the fun-loving hillbilly, Annie, headed the enormous cast.

The juniors were under the excellent supervision of Mr. Robert Dornte and Miss Vera Pence who stepped in at the middle of the year after Miss Ruth Brown passed on.

Here among the decorations for "The World Outside" are the junior officers, Bruce Marquart, vice-president, and Ann Beers, secretary. Not present is president Dale Boone.

► Left: From behind the folds of the drapes on Central's stage came the sauntering troublemakers of "Rebel Without A Cause" to terrorize the streets of Plato's unstable mind. Holding a private, little rumble of their own are Wally Christ, Roger Ember, Onofre Gutierrez, and Dan Linton. As Plato, Bob Bryan lies curled in sleep in the center. The play, which was the timely presentation of the seniors portrayed various aspects and problems of growing up and threw a spotlight on some of the alleged causes of juvenile delinquency.

► Right: A sad moment for Central came when Jim Keim, representing the varsity basketball team, acknowledged the school's gratitude for the efforts and talents of Bill Boyd who became ineligible for action on the hardwood.

'Operation Madball' and 'soph' boys surgery in 'Battle' highlighted class's year

▲ Behind the "eight ball" getting ready for the carnival the sophomore officers have also had to manage their other activities. Here the president, Gordon Bainbridge, points to one of the many "Mad" like posters that hung throughout the building. Looking on are vice-president, Bill Frederick, and Secretary, Sue Davis.

The sophomore year of the Class of '61 was an eventful one. The year started off with a bang, with the sophomore boys winning the best act award in the Calderon's "Battle of the Classexes" and the sophomore girls winning the best costume award.

Next on the soph agenda was the bus trip to Elkhart, January 10. After two successful trips, the class has decided to make the basketball trip an annual affair.

The event of the year was the annual Sophomore Carnival, February 20. While trying to find an unusual name, the class came across "Operation Mad-Ball." The well attended event was a real madball and the sophs came up with Junior Prom funds and many memories. Class sponsors Miss Connie Standish and Mr. George Tricolais stated that cooperation among students and teachers was tops.

The class's final activity was the purchase of blue on white "Bengie" sweatshirts.

The Frosh year was one of events intended on making a well-rounded Centralite

A little bit of everything made the year for the freshmen. Their schedule was one intended to make a well-informed, well-rounded Centralite.

Coming to Central while it was still a little new to everyone, the frosh were not the only befuddled Centralites.

To get to know each other and get into the swing, the fledglings had their first major event, the Freshmen Party, "Black Cat Brawl."

Next introduced was the "Spirit of Central" in an assembly of the same name. The Freshmen were given a broad view of the past three years at Central and a few of the outstanding traditions.

Freshmen were shown the religious aspects of Central February 12 as the Rev. Black presided over an assembly referred to simply as the "Spiritual."

"Sctotofax" concluded the activity of the first year for the now soon-to-be sophomores, April 17. The dance was open to the whole school.

▲ They are only the second set of officers for the freshman class but already they have led their class throughout the year well. Here they pose in front of their bulletin board. They the Rose Mollison, secretary; Bob Thomas, vice-president; and Wally Christ, president.

◀ Right: He didn't think we would snap the shutter. A freshman student poses prettily in general shop.
